Join the Aeolian Singers, one of Hertfordshire's premier choirs, for a feast of Christmas music in the beautiful setting of the Christmas Tree Festival at St John's. The Singers will be performing carols and seasonal songs both ancient and modern, and inviting the audience to join in with singing some traditional favourites.

The programme includes a twentieth century festive gem, Fantasia on Christmas Carols by Vaughan Williams. This short work for baritone and chorus features a number of English folk carols. We are delighted to welcome back soloist Steve Hawksley to perform this joyful piece with us.

The choir from George Street Primary School, Hemel Hempstead, will be another highlight of the evening. The children will be led by Nyree O'Brien in their own selection of Christmas songs.

The Aeolian Singers will be conducted by their Musical Director Stephen Jones and accompanied by organist Nicholas King, Director of Music at St John's, and pianist Anna Le Hair. Anna is the choir's rehearsal accompanist and pursues a busy career as soloist and teacher.

Drinks and mince pies will be served in the interval.

All seating is unreserved with ticket prices as follows:

Adult: £12, which includes one free ticket for a child (under 16 years).

Each additional child: £3.
